Voice, products and values

VOICE AND TONE

Luxury, affordable, community-focused, with catchy lines like "Too fashionable not to WEAR." Warm but elevated: Anine Bing's calm polish with Kikiva's founder warmth. Avoid: tacky or skin-heavy, gym-bro energy, and any health or performance claims.

WHAT WE ARE LAUNCHING (SEPTEMBER)

Booty bands and a vegan ankle strap, presented in a cotton pouch, in custom colours other brands do not stock. The recycled and organic activewear range comes later.

WHAT WE STAND FOR

Sustainability (vegan, recycled, organic), community, design-led femininity, and accessibility, affordable luxury rather than out-of-reach luxury.

STILL BEING CONFIRMED

The name and trademark (with your lawyer), the final custom colours, and the script accent font. We will lock these together.

Scan this and tell me: what is spot on, and what would you change? Once it is right, this becomes the single source of truth everything else is built from.

Concept pieces: did we capture your vision?

You shared an apparel direction on Canva: two-tone bralettes with statement gold straps, in warm peach and cream. Here are two directions we mocked up, one with a jewelled strap and one with a chain, to check we have read your vision and to see which feel you prefer.

Concept renders only, exploring your Canva direction, not final designs or production-ready pieces.

Is this the feel you were going for? Tell us what is right and what is off, and we will refine from there. (These are the future apparel range; the booty-band pattern concepts in the insight document are the accessory side of the same world.)
